tions Officers from Berlin, Cairo, London, Moscow, New Delhi and a State Department representative, the Chairman and Secretary of PROCIB, and delegates from the Library of Congress, the Air Information Division and the National Science Foundation attended the Conference.

e. Exploitation of Foreign Language Publications. PROCIB received a list of critical Far East publications required for the use of the exploitation components represented on the USIB Committee on Exploitation of Foreign Language Publications. After checking the list and reporting on more current bibliographical data regarding the items requested, PROCIB exerted its efforts and by utilization of all sources available to it, succeeded in procuring the majority of the items requested.

f. Commendations. A letter was sent to the State Department endorsing commendations to two regular Publications Officers at Tokyo and Hong Kong. The Committee also endorsed commendations for faithful service to certain local employees at selected U. S. posts abroad.

g. Field Trips. The Chairman of PROCIB visited Northern Italy 18 May - 1 July 1959 to determine availability of publications and names of reliable book-dealers in this important area, which does about 26% of all publishing in Europe.

and [REDACTED] Latin American Area Coordinator in the CIA Library Acquisitions Branch, toured Latin America, 27 February - 15 April 1960, to review the availability of publications of special interest. The great increase in Africa's emergence prompted a survey trip by the Chairman and the Secretary of PROCIB, 13 April - 1 June 1960, to eight selected posts in Africa.

III. MAJOR PROBLEMS

There were two programs of particular concern to PROCIB in its efforts to improve the program for the procurement of foreign publications. The se were:

a. Availability of Communist Chinese Publications. PROCIB became aware in mid-1959 of a proposed embargo for 1960 on many important publications issued by the Communist Chinese. All the world-wide sources available to PROCIB participating agencies are being checked and expanded to ensure as complete coverage of this important segment of procurement as is possible. At the time of the preparation of this report it is still too early to assess the full impact of the proposed embargo. All indications point to a major decrease in the availability of Communist Chinese publications, particularly in the scientific and technical fields. Our best estimates as to the reasons for this embargo are: a) paper shortage, and b) Communist Chinese desire to withhold information.

b. Use of Foreign Currencies Available Under Public Law 480. The 85th Congress amended Public Law 480 to permit the use of available foreign currencies for programs involving the procurement, processing, translation, etc. of foreign publications. The two programs of interest to PROCIB are: (Section 104k, P. L. 85-931) primarily concerned with the translation and utilization of foreign scientific and technical publications, is under the direction of the National Science Foundation; the other (Section 104n, P. L. 85-931) for the evaluation, acquisition and distribution of foreign publications in all fields, is under the direction of the Librarian of Congress. PROCIB is active in a consultative and coordinating capacity to both the Library of Congress and National Science Foundation. The funds for the Library of Congress portion of this project have not as yet been made available to the Librarian of Congress, but some funds were provided in 1958 to the National Science Foundation for its translation program. Both agencies have requests pending with the Bureau of the Budget.
